RE: (KAISER) Trade-mark No TMA299,319
Your File 502052(1)

Dear Sir or Madam:

In my previous correspondence on February 20, 2016 I had submitted a response concerning the entry of KAISER in the online Oxford Reference.

It was my understanding at that time the entry in question was removed based on what I had observed through the only web link that was available to me here; <https://en.oxforddictionaries.com/definition/kaiser>

Apparently the entry was never part of www.oxforddictionaries.com as it was only shown on www.oxfordreference.com. I do not have access to oxfordreference.com since it requires a subscription. I assumed what was shown with their dictionaries link would be the same as their reference link. I was informed later that the entry was in fact not altered but only because they were having trouble editing their online database. I am now assured first hand that the entry is changed to a proper proprietary term, which would suggest the aforesaid objection has been overcome. (Please see attached email printouts)

In my previous letter I also stated to "invoke the benefit of section 12(2), if still required". I apologize; I misunderstood the reference to 12(2) and how it applies to this application. The previous Examiner suggested I could use section 12(2) but I now know it was because of the "type" definition with Oxford. I do not believe it is required and wish to withdraw my request to invoke section 12(2).

Furthermore, I would also like to clarify this application in more detail. Although this is considered as a new application, it is still relative to the original trade-mark that signifies Kaiser became distinctive as a "Card Game" in 1983 and the original trade-mark does effectively govern this in Canada.

Isn't it the purpose of each trade-mark to become recognized as its wares? I believe mine has done this, and it is because of the product Gayowski sold in the 1980's. Kaiser was not a known card game in 1983 but is now, so what happened between then and today? Some people will not relate Kaiser to a product, even though there were 100,000 packages sold in a province of only 1 million people in the 1980's.

A single purchase of the game taught 4 people how to play because it is a 4-player game. This can grow exponentially over decades if played with a regular deck of cards. Using a regular deck of cards is private non-commercial use and it should not conflict with the future use of the trade-mark. If someone was taught this game but never purchased it, they might assume that it is public domain like every other card game.

Any mention of Kaiser as a card game on the Internet came years later and references the personal private use of the name even though the sales provided the Legacy of the game in Saskatchewan. If a website lists the rules to Kaiser it is because Kaiser does have official rules. They are the ones that were sold with the packages in the 1980's and the same that are in my software and on my website since 1996. If I web search "rules to scrabble", the first site I see; www.scrabblesite.com contains the rules, yet it is not a Hasbro website. I can also search rules to Yahtzee and find numerous sites listing the rules, yet still a Hasbro product that can also be played with any set of dice.

I am not aware of other trademarked card games other than Uno and Wizard. The similar card games at that time were Three-Spot and Troika. A trade-mark search shows "Troika" was also registered at one time for use as "Board games". Gayowski told me he took a variation from both these games when he wrote his rules to Kaiser. When Gayowski chose the name of this card game he went through the proper channels of registering it. The CIPO allowed his registration because it was not a known card game at that time. I doubt Hearts, Euchre, Poker, Bridge, Cribbage, Spades or Solitaire would have been approved.

Unfortunately, the drawback with this trade-mark is that people can use the name privately and not associate it to a purchase of a product. The public may assume that because we can play a game with a regular deck of cards and call it Kaiser, then Kaiser isn't a trademark. Fortunately, a trade-mark does not need to be popular or well known to be applicable. I know a KitKat is a candy bar but I do not know who makes them. If a consumer buys a deck of playing cards but uses them to play Kaiser, they did not buy Kaiser. I could always take any pie plate, throw it around and call it a Frisbee but that doesn't mean Wham-O didn't trade-mark it first and sell them.

If the essential function of a trade-mark is to exclusively identify the commercial source or origin of products or services, then I believe mine has done that. The source has always been through my predecessor or me. This has held true for 33 years. The only difference now is If a consumer wishes to buy a "card game" titled Kaiser then their only choice is to buy it as a computer game because digital is now the source for many purchases including music, books, movies and games.

Although I am not the original person to register KAISER in 1983, you can see in the affidavit signed by Sylvester Gayowski that he chose the name, crafted the rules and was the first to use the KAISER name for a Card Game. It is my understanding that when the original trade-mark was granted in 1983 that this owner had exclusive use of the mark for sales on all playing card games and this included computer playing card games. The original trademark does have me Kevin Currie, on file under Footnotes as "Record License Agreement" (evidence on File No. 502052). If the original wares of the trade-mark are registered as "playing card game" then extending those wares to include "computer games" should also be accepted because these are wares that were and are still used with the trade-mark name on them.

I do not see any reason why this application should not be approved and move on to the next stage.

Please, use the affidavits and sample pictures in the last correspondence to demonstrate that what I have expressed here is factual and not just circumstantial.

Thank you for your attention to this application.

Sincerely,

Kevin Currie
Trade-mark Owner

Dear Mr Currie,

Thank you for your email. I apologize for not replying sooner: a failure with our email servers has meant that I am only now able to access email from the last week or so.

Please be assured that we are still trying to resolve this issue and I am currently working on obtaining a log-in for Oxford Reference for you, so that you will be able to check the entry yourself. In the meantime you may cite this correspondence in your response to the CIPO.

Finally, I would like to reiterate the note on proprietary status that accompanies our dictionaries:

This dictionary includes some words which have or are asserted to have proprietary status as trade marks or otherwise. Their inclusion does not imply that they have acquired for legal purposes a non-proprietary or general significance nor any other judgement concerning their legal status. In cases where the editorial staff have some evidence that a word has proprietary status this is indicated in the entry for that word but no judgement concerning the legal status of such words is made or implied thereby.

Given that 'Kaiser' is currently a registered trademark in Canada for card games, we are endeavouring to change the entry to reflect this. However, as the note states, the inclusion of the word does not imply that it has acquired for legal purposes a non-proprietary or general significance.

Yours sincerely,
Eleanor Maier

RE: (KAISER) Trade-mark No TMA299,319
Your File 502052(1)

Dear Jordan:

I am respectfully requesting to have my application for KAISER as a "Computer Game" or "Computer Card Game" reexamined with consideration to new amendments and the evidence attached.

Your key objection noted was the entry by the Canadian Oxford dictionary that would describe Kaiser as a type rather than as proprietary. I felt this definition was erroneous and unsubstantiated in describing a 32-year-old Trademark game. My obligation as a Trademark owner was to merely ask the people at Oxford, without bias, to explain their sources for accuracy regarding the definition of Kaiser as they had entered. Their response was that Kaiser was indeed Proprietary and should not have been entered as such. I quote their reply in part below;

"At Oxford Dictionaries we take pride in ensuring that our content is accurate, therefore we will amend the entry in Oxford Reference Online to reflect the fact that 'Kaiser' (in sense 3) is a proprietary term. You will be able to review the amended entry in a future online update and in any future print editions containing the entry."

A recent visit to the link would indicate their amendment was to remove the definition entirely. Please feel free to correspond with Oxford as to their motive and clarification for this removal. I fully understand that it is a Trademark owners responsibility to correct the pubic if their mark is misused or in danger of "genericide" including such entries.

Additionally I am also submitting evidence to prove distinctiveness and invoke the benefit of section 12(2) of the Trade-marks Act, if it is still required.

X

I will start by respectfully disputing, that Kaiser not be equally compared to such games, as euchre, cribbage or hearts on the basis that they are worldwide public domain and Kaiser is not. Any English speaking person knows those card games by name. Instead Kaiser has been isolated primarily to Saskatchewan and for known reasons.

A more particular comparison would be to the card game "Uno". https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Uno_\(card_game\))

I have only been the owner of the Trademark since 2014 but am well aware of the history and usage of the game over the past 32 years. I have used the Trademark myself for over 20 years. There are 2 primary reasons why Kaiser is referred to as a Saskatchewan game only.

1. The creator and his family are from Prince Albert, Saskatchewan.
2. The Computer Software is also from Saskatchewan.

The birth of Kaiser successfully started when S Gayowski and his family manufactured and distributed the game with his rules and regulations as a product in Saskatchewan in 1984. Eventually Kaiser was also played using a regular deck of playing cards after removing the unneeded cards.

The facts are that from 1984 to about 2000, the International Playing Card Company manufactured and sold one hundred thousand packages of the Kaiser game with Rules. These were primarily sold in Saskatchewan. Sales were mainly localized to Saskatoon, Prince Albert, Regina, Yorkton and small suburbs and towns. Sold in Drugstores, Cigar shops and game stores.

I recall my first purchase of the Kaiser game in 1987. It wasn't until 1992 that I was reintroduced to the game again and decided to make it available on computer. Overall it took me 3 years to complete my first version. I contacted the Trademark owner who lived in Prince Albert, Sask and completed a license agreement. I initially started with 2000 packages and sold them to local computer stores in the first year. In 1997 I created version 2 and had 5000 packages made and sold them across Saskatchewan. In 2002 I started on a new Internet Multi Player version that was officially introduced in 2005. From 2005 to present I have sold over 8000 memberships.

"Development of association with the user as a source of the goods through continued sales and advertising of the goods might turn a 'weak' mark into a strong, distinctive trademark. a mark which is initially a weak one may, by reason of subsequent use and promotion, acquire such distinctiveness that it can function as a significant indication of a particular producer as source of the goods with which it is used"

I have attached 2 affidavits along with evidence of frequent exclusive sales over a period over 32 years in order to prove this distinctiveness. It is also self-evident that no prior use or competition for use of the name exists in Canada other than a Trademark infringement challenge that ended with a name change. If necessary, I would also accept "Computer Card Games" as a secondary choice of wares if "Computer Games" were not specific enough.

"The strongest trademarks set themselves apart from others and leave the consumer with no doubt of the source of the product or service. These "strong" marks are distinctive enough to differentiate the product from the similar products of competitors, and can also withstand a judge's oversight enough to be widely protected from third party use."

I would also request that any replies to this specific correspondence only, be addressed back to me directly via the Trademark owners address on file below.

1. I was the exclusive Kaiser Trademark registrant and owner from 1984 to 2014

For Four (4) Players
Ages 6 - Adult

Kaiser is a unique card game designed for four players, each player playing in partnership with the player sitting directly opposite to him. The object of the game is for one team to score fifty-two (52) points at which they win the game.

The Kaiser deck is composed of thirty-two (32) cards.

Ace, King, etc., of Diamonds through to the 7 of Diamonds

Ace, King, etc., of Clubs through to the 7 of Clubs

Ace, King, etc., of Hearts through to the 8 of Hearts plus the 5 of Hearts

Ace, King, etc., of Spades through to the 8 of Spades plus the 3 of Spades player not being able to follow suit, can play a club to win the trick. For example, if player one leads the ace of diamonds and player two does not have any diamonds, he can play any club suited card to beat the ace of diamonds to win the trick.

"NO TRUMP" BIDDING

Any bid in a "no trump" is worth double its value. That is if a team bids seven "no trump" and is successful, they get fourteen points. By the same token if they do not make their seven bid, they go backwards fourteen points. The opposition in a no trump bid counts as before, one point per trick.

PENALTY POINTS

As mentioned before, the trick containing the three of spades has three penalty points. For example, if a team takes one trick with the three of spades, they go back three full points. Or if they should take the trick with the three of spades and one other trick, they still go back three penalty points. At the point a team takes three tricks with the three of spades, they then break even.

MINUS SCORING

At any point in a game, if a team does not have enough points to cover a lost hand they

DEALING THE CARDS

One player is designated the dealer and proceeds to deal the cards out one at a time in a clockwise direction, until all cards are dealt, such that each player has eight cards. There is a definite advantage to being the dealer, so an equitable method such as cutting high card is used to determine the dealer. The highest bidder gets to lead the first card. All players must follow suit, for example if a club is led all players must play a club if they have one in their hand. Should a player not have a club, he may choose to play a trump card or discard any card in his hand he so wishes to. If no trump cards are present, the highest card of the suit led wins the trick. The cards in Kaiser all have face value. With the ace being the highest rank, the king next, etc., down the line. The highest bidder gets to declare the trump suit he wishes to play in, if a player wishes to play no "trump", he must state so at the time that he declares his bid.

TRICK VALUE

Each trick won by a team is worth one point. The team winning the trick containing the five of hearts gets five bonus points. The team taking the trick with the three of spades then have to minus score. For example, if a team bid seven on the first hand of a game and didn't make it, they are scored at minus seven. Should a team at any point in the game get to a minus 52 score position, the game is automatically lost. Just as you win at 52 points, you automatically lose at minus 52 points.

SCORING AT 47 POINTS OR OVER

Once a team gets within five points of winning a game, they must successfully bid a hand or steal the five of hearts away from the opposition in order to advance in scoring to win the game. That is once you have 47, 48, 49, 50 or 51 points you cannot win the game counting two or three points at a time, when the opposition is bidding. You must make a successful bid or take the five of hearts to win the game. For example, if the score is 47 for one team and 40 for the other, should the team of 40 points bid a hand of seven and be successful, they would advance to 47, but the team with 47 points would count no tricks.

MISDEAL

A misdeal can be called by any player not being dealt at least one face card. Aces are suffers a loss of three penalty points. For example, if a team takes four tricks with one trick containing the five of hearts and one trick containing the three of spades, they would count 4 points for the four tricks taken, plus 5 points for the five of hearts to make a total of nine, less three points for the three of spades thus ending up with 6 points for the hand.

GAME CONCEPT

The concept of Kaiser is to plan the strategy of the hand of the cards dealt to you so that with the help of your partner, you are able to win as many tricks as possible. Each trick won is worth one point. The trick containing the five of hearts is worth five bonus points and the trick containing the three of spades has three penalty points. Therefore, the whole game revolves around taking the trick with the five of hearts and trying to give the opposition the trick with the three of spades.

BIDDING PROCEDURES

The bidding procedure is as follows:

a) The player sitting to the left of the dealer gets to bid first. The minimum bid he can make is five and the maximum bid he can make is twelve. If the player does not wish to classed as face cards. A misdeal can also be called by any player who is dealt 4 eights, 4 nines, or 4 tens. In either of the above mentioned examples, the player calling for a new deal must do so when it is his turn to bid. For example, if you are the second bidder and you wish to call a misdeal, you must do so when it comes your time to bid. You cannot wait until all the players have bid to declare your misdeal.

Should all four players pass during a bidding procedure, again there is a misdeal. Whenever a hand is dealt over again, the cards pass on to the next player, the hand is never redealt by the same player.

TOURNAMENT RULES

Time becomes a definite factor during Kaiser tournaments, so there have been several rules instituted to speed up the game. First there are no misdeals, every hand must be played. Minimum bid becomes seven instead of five. If all players pass, the dealer must play for seven, he cannot pass. There is a one hour time limit for each game played.

or cannot make a bid, he must pass and let the next person sitting to his left bid.

b) Each player gets to bid only once per hand played, therefore it is important to bid as high as you possibly can because you only get one chance.

c) Each player must bid higher than the preceding bidder or he must pass. There are only two exceptions to this rule. One exception pertains to a "no trump" bid for example: a seven "no trump" bid is deemed to be higher than a bid of seven in a trump suit. Therefore, if player one bids seven, player two can bid seven "no trump" and is the higher bidder. The second exception to the rule pertains to the dealer. The dealer always has the right to play at the same level as the highest bid preceding him. For example, if the highest bid is seven when it comes to the dealer's turn, he can in turn bid seven and is the highest bidder.

d) Any player wishing to make a bid in "no trump" must do so at the time that he declares his bid as previously mentioned.

e) All other bids in a trump suit are not declared until the highest bid is determined. The higher bidder then declares the trump suit he wishes to play in.

CONCLUSION

The competitive nature of this game provides the challenge that is required for a very entertaining and successful card game.

SCORING

We will now deal with the method of scoring. As previously mentioned, the object of the game is to get fifty-two points before your opposition in order to win. The highest bidder gets to declare trump and leads the first card. For example, if he bid seven, then his team must make a combination of tricks and bonus points to total at least seven. If this is achieved, the team is then given seven points. All other tricks over seven are counted one point each. For example, if a team bid seven and makes eight points, they are given credit for eight points, not just the seven that they were required to make.

However, if the team does not make the seven tricks they bid, they then lose seven points. For example, if a team bids seven and only makes five tricks, they then lose seven from their present score. The opposing team counts one point per number of tricks it makes. As mentioned before, each trick is worth one point.

TRUMP BIDDING

The highest bidder gets to declare the trump suit he wishes to play in. For example, if the highest bidder has declared clubs trump suit, at any point in the game, any

Pour quatre (4) joueurs, de 6 ans à l'âge adulte

Le Kaiser est un jeu de carte unique en son genre, conçu pour quatre personnes, les partenaires étant assis face à face autour de la table. L'objet d'une partie est de marquer cinquante-deux (52) points; la première des deux équipes qui atteint ce total gagne la partie.

Pour le Kaiser, le paquet de cartes ne compte que trente-deux (32) cartes.

L'as, le roi, etc. de carreau jusqu'au 7 de carreau inclusivement.

L'as, le roi, etc. de trèfle jusqu'au 7 de trèfle inclusivement.

L'as, le roi, etc. de coeur jusqu'au 8 de coeur inclusivement, plus le 5 de coeur.

L'as, le roi, etc. de pique jusqu'au 8 de sept, son équipe doit alors accumuler au moins sept points, y compris la prime et la pénalité possibles. Si les deux partenaires y parviennent, l'équipe a alors droit à sept points. Au delà de ces sept points, toutes les autres levées donnent droit à un point chacune. Par exemple, si une équipe déclare sept et accumule huit points, on lui crédite huit points, et non pas seulement les sept points que les deux partenaires devaient totaliser.

Par contre, si l'équipe ne réussit pas à obtenir sept points, on déduit alors sept points de sa marque totale. Par conséquent, si une équipe doit accumuler sept points pour satisfaire à sa déclaration de sept, mais qu'elle ne gagne que cinq points, elle perd alors sept points. Les sept points sont soustraits de sa marque totale à ce moment-là. (Une équipe peut donc avoir une marque négative.) L'autre équipe reçoit un point pour chaque levée, en tenant compte de toute prime ou pénalité.

LA DETERMINATION DE L'ATOUT

Le plus haut enchérisseur a le privilège de déterminer quel sera l'atout pour la ronde en question. Par exemple, si le plus haut enchérisseur a choisi le trèfle comme atout, à n'importe quel point de la ronde, tout joueur in-clue pique inclusivement, plus le 3 de pique.

LA DISTRIBUTION DES CARTES

Le joueur qui a été désigné comme donneur distribue les cartes, une à la fois, dans le sens des aiguilles d'une montre, jusqu'à ce que chaque joueur ait huit cartes. Le fait d'être le donneur comporte un avantage réel; par conséquent, il faut choisir une méthode équitable pour déterminer qui sera le donneur, comme en coupant pour la plus haute carte. Le dernier enchérisseur joue la première carte. Tous les autres joueurs doivent le suivre; par exemple, si le joueur partant a joué un trèfle, tous les autres doivent jouer un trèfle s'ils en ont un en main. Si un joueur n'a pas de trèfle, il peut choisir de jouer une carte d'atout ou de se débarrasser de toute autre carte qu'il a en main. Si personne n'a joué un atout, c'est la plus haute carte de la couleur jouée initialement qui emporte la levée. Au Kaiser, toutes les cartes ont une valeur nominale. L'as est la plus haute carte, puis le roi, et ainsi de suite. Le plus haut ou dernier enchérisseur a le choix de l'atout; si un participant désire jouer une partie "sans atout", il doit déclarer son intention dès sa première enchère ou son appel initial.

capable de jouer un trèfle peut utiliser une carte d'atout pour gagner la levée. Advenant que le premier joueur parte avec l'as de carreau et que le joueur suivant n'a pas de carreau, il peut jouer n'importe quelle carte de trèfle et faire la levée (à moins qu'un joueur subséquent n'ait pas de carreau lui aussi et joue un atout plus élevé).

DECLARATION "SANS ATOUT"

Toute déclaration réussie "sans atout" vaut le double de sa valeur nominale. Si une équipe réussit une déclaration ou une enchère de sept "sans atout", elle a donc droit à quatorze points. Par contre, si cette équipe manque son coup, elle recule de quatorze points. Dans le cas d'une ronde sans atout, les adversaires comptent leurs points comme d'habitude, à raison d'un point par levée, en tenant compte de toute prime ou pénalité.

PENALITE

Comme on l'a mentionné précédemment, la levée comprenant le trois de pique entraîne une perte ou pénalité de trois points. Pour compenser le trois de pique, une équipe doit donc faire au moins trois levées en tout. Avec trois levées, l'équipe malchanceuse n'a droit à aucun point (sauf si l'une de ses levées contient

French

LA VALEUR DES LEVEES

Chaque levée faite par une équipe vaut un point. L'équipe qui fait la levée comprenant le cinq de coeur reçoit une prime de cinq points. L'équipe qui fait la levée comprenant le trois de pique subit une perte de trois points. Par exemple, si une équipe emporte quatre levées, dont l'une contient le cinq de coeur et une autre contient le trois de pique, cette équipe accumule 4 points pour les quatre levées, plus 5 points pour le cinq de coeur, soit un total de neuf points, moins 3 points pour le trois de pique, pour finir avec une marque de 6 points pour cette ronde.

L'IDEE GENERALE DU JEU

Le concept du Kaiser est d'élaborer une stratégie qui vous permettra, avec les cartes qu'on vous a données et avec l'aide de votre partenaire, d'accumuler autant de bonnes levées que possible. Chaque levée vaut un point. La levée comprenant le cinq de coeur donne droit à une prime ou à un boni de cinq points, tandis que la levée comprenant le trois de pique entraîne une perte ou une pénalité de trois points. Par conséquent, le but primordial du jeu est d'emporter la levée qui contient le cinq de coeur et d'essayer de forcer l'équipe adverse de faire la levée qui le cinq de coeur).

MARQUE NEGATIVE

An'importe quel point au cours d'une partie, si une équipe n'a pas suffisamment de points pour couvrir une déclaration manquée, on lui donne alors une marque négative. Par exemple, si une équipe, à la première ronde d'une partie, tente de réaliser une déclaration de sept et ne réussit pas, on lui donne alors une marque de moins sept (-7). Si, au cours d'une partie, une équipe atteint une marque de moins cinquante-deux (-52), elle perd automatiquement la partie. Un total de +52 points assure une victoire automatique et un total de -52 points signifie une défaite automatique!

LA MARQUE A PARTIR DE 47 POINTS OU PLUS

Dès qu'une équipe est à cinq points ou moins d'une victoire, elle doit réussir une déclaration ou "voler" le cinq de coeur aux adversaires, pour avancer et gagner la partie. Cela veut dire que lorsqu'une équipe a 47, 48, 49, 50 ou 51 points, elle ne peut pas gagner la partie simplement en ajoutant deux ou trois points à la fois, lorsque c'est contient le trois de pique.

LES DECLARATIONS ET LES ENCHERES

Voici comment se font les déclarations et les enchères:

a) C'est le joueur assis à la gauche du donneur qui fait la déclaration d'ouverture. La déclaration d'ouverture minimale est de cinq et le maximum est de douze. Si un joueur ne veut pas ou ne peut pas faire une déclaration ou une enchère, il doit passer et c'est la personne à sa gauche qui continue.

b) Chaque joueur ne peut faire qu'une déclaration par main jouée. Il est donc très important de faire une déclaration aussi élevée que possible, car vous n'avez qu'une chance par ronde.

c) Chaque joueur doit enchérir sur la déclaration précédente ou bien passer. Il n'y a que deux exceptions à cette règle. La première exception se rapporte à une déclaration "sans atout": par exemple, une déclaration de sept "sans atout" est considérée comme étant plus haute qu'une déclaration de sept coeur, pique, carreau ou trèfle. Par conséquent, si un joueur déclare sept d'une couleur et qu'un joueur suivant déclare sept sans atout, ce deuxième exception à cette règle concerne le donneur. Le donneur a toujours le droit de faire une l'équipe adverse qui a fait la plus haute déclaration ou enchère. Pour finir et gagner la partie, une équipe doit réussir une déclaration ou bien enlever le cinq de coeur à l'adversaire. Par exemple, si une équipe a 47 points et l'autre en a 40, et si l'équipe ayant 40 points réussit une déclaration de sept, elle avance à 47 points et l'autre équipe reste à 47 points.

MALDONNE

Tout joueur qui n'a pas reçu au moins une figure peut proclamer qu'il y a eu maldonne. Les as sont des figures. Tout joueur à qui on a donné 4 huit, 4 neuf ou 4 dix peut aussi demander une nouvelle donne. Dans l'un ou l'autre cas, le joueur affecté doit attendre son tour pour déclarer la maldonne. Par exemple, si le joueur est le deuxième enchérisseur, il peut demander une nouvelle donne quand arrive son tour de faire sa déclaration. On ne peut pas attendre que tous les joueurs aient fait leur déclaration ou enchère, avant de demander une nouvelle donne.

S'il arrivait que les quatre joueurs passent durant les enchères, il faut alors effectuer une nouvelle donne ou distribution des cartes. Quand il y a maldonne, les cartes déclaration égale à la plus haute enchère précédente, pour ainsi devenir le dernier et plus haut enchérisseur. Par exemple, si la plus haute déclaration avant le tour du donneur est sept, ce dernier peut faire une déclaration de sept et être quand même le plus haut enchérisseur.

d) Comme on l'a mentionné précédemment, tout joueur qui désire faire une déclaration "sans atout" doit signaler son intention au moment de sa déclaration ou de son enchère.

e) Si la main va se jouer avec un atout, c'est le plus haut enchérisseur qui détermine quel sera cet atout. En d'autres mots, l'ouvreur et les enchérisseurs ne déclarent pas leur couleur préférée. Seul le plus haut enchérisseur déclare à la fin sa couleur préférée et détermine ainsi quel sera l'atout. Par contre, comme nous l'avons déjà stipulé, toute déclaration ou enchère "sans atout" doit être identifiée immédiatement.

LES POINTS

Voici comment on calcule les points. Comme nous l'avons mentionné précédemment, l'objet du jeu est d'accumuler cinquante-deux points avant vos adversaires, pour ainsi gagner la partie. Le plus haut enchérisseur a le privilège de choisir l'atout et c'est lui qui joue la première carte. Par exemple, s'il a fait une déclaration de passent au joueur suivant qui devient alors le donneur.

REGLEMENTS POUR UN TOURNOI

Le temps est devenu un facteur important durant les tournois de Kaiser. Pour accélérer le jeu durant les tournois, on a donc institué des règles spéciales. Premièrement, il n'y a jamais maldonne; toutes les mains doivent être jouées. La déclaration minimale est de sept au lieu de cinq. Si tous les joueurs passent, le donneur doit faire une déclaration automatique de sept; il ne peut pas passer. Il y a une limite d'une heure pour chaque partie jouée.

CONCLUSION

A cause de sa nature compétitive, ce jeu de cartes est vraiment intéressant et constitue un défi passionnant.

Re: Gayowski Agreement
-Kaiser Game

Dear Sir:

I acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 6th forwarding two copies of the Agreement with respect to the production and marketing of the above game.

This Agreement was drafted by our solicitors and sent to you by letter dated May 30th last. At that time the date of December 31st, 1983 for the marketing of this game to the public was a reasonable date. However, four months have now elapsed, and a labour dispute has been in progress for fourteen weeks and continues at our manufacturing plant in Windsor, Ontario. Although it is still possible that we can meet the date of December 31st, 1983, set forth in Paragraph 4. of the Agreement we may need to rely on the extension of such time limit arising because of the current labour dispute.

On the basis set forth above I return one copy of the Agreement duly executed by the Corporation under its corporate seal.

Very truly yours

D.F. Brookbanks

Card Games: Miscellaneous Point Trick Games

In this group I have collected some point trick games which do not at present seem to fit into any of particular group. Some of these games may be formed into new categories if other related games are found.

- Gleek - a seventeenth century game with point values for certain trumps
- Cucco (or Cöch) and Zifuli - Italian point trick games using cuckoo cards
- Texas Forty-two - a trick taking game using dominoes: the scoring tiles are those whose spots total 5 or 10.
- Kaiser - a Canadian game, of uncertain origin, with a point for each trick and one bonus card and one penalty card.
- Penneech - a seventeenth century game in which the trump suit changes for every trick.
- Yukon - another possibly Canadian game, with high-scoring jacks.
- Calypso - each player has a different trump suit, and cards won in tricks are collected with the aim of completing 13-card sequences.
- Dehla Pakad and Mendikot - two Indian games in which the tens are the only counting cards.

At the Caleb Village seniors home in North Battleford, Sask., a group gathers every week to play -- sometimes as late as midnight -- a card game called Kaiser that traces its roots to Saskatchewan and parts of Quebec.

There's another group that plays it at the legion in Nipawin, Sask. One of those players says he's played it for 60 years.

So you can imagine their surprise to learn that the game's name is trademarked and that it's now the subject of a lawsuit between two Saskatchewan computer programmers: one with an online version who owns the rights to the name, and the other who has recently developed an app.

"Basically he thinks he has a valid trademark and I think it's not a valid trademark," said Kaiser app designer Tod Baudais, who lives in Thode, south of Saskatoon. "People are almost insulted that this guy has trademarked some of their family heritage."

Kevin Currie has been selling computer versions of Kaiser since the 1990s and is the current holder of the trademark. He said he's filed the lawsuit because he has to defend what's legally his.

"Everybody makes me out to be the bad guy because of what I'm out to protect," said Currie, speaking from Saskatoon. "I've put a lot of money into this."

Kaiser is a trick-taking game played with a 32-card deck. If standard playing cards are used, the penalty card, or the "kaiser," is the three of spades. The bonus card is the five of hearts.

John McLeod, who runs the online card games website pagat.com based in England, said the game may have been born in Quebec in the late 19th century under the name Les Rois, which he says was also played with specially produced cards under the name Lost Heir.

During the First World War, the game was reinterpreted with the four suits representing England, France, Germany and Russia, McLeod says. The kaiser card was named for Kaiser Wilhelm II, while the five of hearts was called Joffre, for the French general Joseph Joffre.

"It may have been contact between soldiers from different parts of Canada serving in Europe in WWI that led to the spread of the game from Quebec to Saskatchewan and maybe even Alberta," McLeod wrote in an email, noting the game is still known as Joffre in Quebec.

Currie programmed and sold his first computer version of Kaiser in the 1990s. To do so, he said, he licensed the rights to the name from Sylvester Gayowski of Prince Albert, Sask., who registered it in 1985 and sold decks of cards specifically meant for the game.

In April of this year, Currie obtained full rights to the trademark and says in the lawsuit that about 12,000 memberships have been sold to play his online version, which allows Kaiser players to compete against each other over the Internet.

"I'm protecting the public so there's no confusion over what they buy."

According to the Canadian Intellectual Property Office, trademark applications are researched to make sure they aren't prohibited by the Trade Marks Act. Applications are advertised in the Trade-marks Journal before they are approved.

Registration is prohibited when the mark is the name of the good in any language. An example the department gives is if someone tried to register the word "online."

"The purpose is to prevent someone from appropriating a clearly descriptive word (or words) and placing legitimate competition at an undue disadvantage in relation to language that is common to all," explained Lauren Hebert, a spokesperson for Industry Canada.

Baudais said he's fighting the lawsuit by arguing that the trademark issued in 1985 is invalid because Kaiser was already well-known as a card game in Saskatchewan. He said he's been collecting names and stories of people who played Kaiser prior to 1985 as part of his defence.

The Encyclopedia of Saskatchewan has no entry for the game and the Western Development Museum says it has no information either.

Lawrence Fisher, 84, who plays with the group in Nipawin, says he learned Kaiser when he was a young teacher on his first job near Bruno, Sask., in the 1950s.

"I really don't know where these people got it from. They were mostly of German descent."

Margaret Tipton, 53, who is the administrative assistant at Caleb Village, said she played Kaiser every day at lunchtime when she was in high school in North Battleford in the 1970s.

"My mum and dad knew how to play it. I'm not sure how they learned."

McLeod said some people in Saskatchewan of Ukrainian descent also call the game Troika, after the three of spades.

"From the information I have managed to collect, the main concentrations of players seem to be in Saskatchewan and Quebec," McLeod wrote.

Gayowski, the original trademark holder, said he won't talk about the lawsuit since it is now before the court. He learned the game from his family.

"It was called Kaiser and it was called Three-Spot and some other names," Gayowski said, although most people knew it as Kaiser.

Currie said it doesn't matter if people played Kaiser before the trademark was issued, because nobody was using it commercially to describe a card game before 1985.

"It belongs to nobody until somebody claims it and owns it."

Kaiser card game app to become Troika

A Saskatchewan programmer says it's cheaper for him to simply call his Kaiser card game app something else rather than fight a lawsuit over the name. Tod Baudais began selling an app for Kaiser earlier this year, but another programmer in the province who said he owns the trademark took legal action. Baudais vowed to fight, claiming the name Kaiser has been associated with the game in Saskatchewan for decades. But he now says the challenge would cost thousands of dollars, so he's decided to call his app Troika instead.

The game, which has roots in Saskatchewan and Quebec, is mostly known as Kaiser in Saskatchewan but some people also call it Troika or Three-Spot.

In Quebec, the game is known as Joffre.

"Basically I was told by my lawyer that the full court process to invalidate the trademark would cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of $150,000. So far the app has made about $1500," Baudais, who lives in Thode, said in an email.

"It didn't really take too long to figure out that it wasn't going to be worth it to me to continue. I probably would have needed a second mortgage on my house and I couldn't drag my family through that."

Baudais said the trademark holder, K.C. Magic Data, has accepted his offer to change the name of the app and that the issue is now resolved.

Kevin Currie of K.C. Magic Data confirmed in an email that the lawsuit is over. Currie said that as part of the resolution, Baudais also agreed to update all prior downloads of the app to the new name.

The resolution requires that Baudais not use Kaiser in any business or products, said Currie, who lives in Saskatoon.

"I am very satisfied with the outcome as it was essentially the objective from the start," he wrote.

Kaiser is a trick-taking game played with a 32-card deck. If standard playing cards are used, the penalty card, or the "kaiser," is the three of spades. The bonus card is the five of hearts.

John McLeod, who runs the online card games website pagat.com based in England, said the game may have been born in Quebec in the late 19th century under the name Les Rois, which he says was also played with specially produced cards under the name Lost Heir.

During the First World War, the game was reinterpreted with the four suits representing England, France, Germany and Russia, McLeod says. The kaiser card was named for Kaiser Wilhelm II, while the five of hearts was called Joffre, for the French general Joseph Joffre.

Currie has been selling computer versions of Kaiser since the 1990s and currently operates an online version of the game. He originally licensed the rights to the name from Sylvester Gayowski of Prince Albert, Sask., who registered it in 1985 and sold decks of cards specifically meant for the game.

In April of this year, Currie obtained full rights to the trademark.

When the lawsuit was launched, many card players expressed surprise to learn the name of their favourite card game was trademarked.

Groups of players meet weekly at seniors' centres and Royal Canadian Legions across Saskatchewan for Kaiser matches, with some claiming they've been playing it since the 1950s.

Baudais had argued it was wrong for the name to have been trademarked in the first place, while Currie said he was obliged to defend something he had paid for that was legally his.

Baudais now writes the two sides have agreed to disagree and have moved on.

"I'd still like to thank everyone that has supported me over the past few months. It's really great hearing about all of the family stories and how this card game played a part in it," Baudais wrote.

Currie, meanwhile, said people can still play Kaiser just like they always have and always will.

"He can still sell the same game under a new name and I can still sell my computer game under the name Kaiser."

Dear Sir:

RE: Trademark: KAISER – Amendment to Registration No. TMA299319
File No.: 502052(1)
Applicant: Kevin Currie

We are responding to your report dated February 19, 2015.

The Applicant maintains that the trademark KAISER is not descriptive, or deceptively misdescriptive, of the character of the goods found in the application.

The Applicant is the present owner of KAISER (TMA299319), which was registered as a trademark on January 18, 1985 for wares described as “playing card game, playing card game rules and regulations.” The current application, therefore, is an implied extension of the wares already found in the original trademark described as a “playing card game.”

Where the Registrar has permitted another trademark of a like nature to be registered, some effort must be able to reconcile the inconsistency (Reed Stenhouse Co. v Canada (Registrar of Trade Marks), [1992] FCJ No. 887). In this case, it is difficult to reconcile the inconsistency of allowing KAISER for a “playing card game” and then refusing KAISER for “computer games”.

We are enclosing photographs depicting the trademark as it was used over the years. The first is of the playing card game sold with the original trademark. The remaining photographs depict the Applicant’s various versions of his computer game beginning in 1995. The CD package is from 2005, when the network service was introduced.

Notably, all use of KAISER by the Applicant was as a licensee of the original owner, until the trademark was acquired by him last year. The Applicant's license agreement was recorded on January 29, 1998 on the registration for KAISER (TMA299319)

The Applicant has been using the trademark KAISER under license (until the trademark was acquired by him) in association with computer games since September 30, 1995 and services described as "providing multiple user access to a computer network" since March 15, 2005. Since he was the first and only person to make KAISER a computer game in 1996, the Applicant maintains that any association of KAISER with computer games was caused by the Applicant using the trademark in issue.

In this sense, the Applicant's trademark is similar to the trademark SCRABBLE which is registered by Hasbro, Inc. for "games including board and playing pieces" (UCA47061). If SCRABBLE can be registered for a board game, there is no reason why KAISER cannot be registered for computer games.

For the foregoing reasons, the Applicant requests that the examiner withdraw his objection to the registration of the trademark and allow it to proceed to advertisement for opposition.

Saskatchewan card players surprised to learn 'Kaiser' game is trademarked

At the Caleb Village seniors home in North Battleford, Sask., a group gathers every week to play -- sometimes as late as midnight -- a card game called Kaiser that traces its roots to Saskatchewan and parts of Quebec.

There's another group that plays it at the legion in Nipawin, Sask. One of those players says he's played it for 60 years.

So you can imagine their surprise to learn that the game's name is trademarked and that it's now the subject of a lawsuit between two Saskatchewan computer programmers: one with an online version who owns the rights to the name, and the other who has recently developed an app.

"Basically he thinks he has a valid trademark and I think it's not a valid trademark," said Kaiser app designer Tod Baudais, who lives in Thode, south of Saskatoon. "People are almost insulted that this guy has trademarked some of their family heritage."

Kevin Currie has been selling computer versions of Kaiser since the 1990s and is the current holder of the trademark. He said he's filed the lawsuit because he has to defend what's legally his.

"Everybody makes me out to be the bad guy because of what I'm out to protect," said Currie, speaking from Saskatoon. "I've put a lot of money into this."

Kaiser is a trick-taking game played with a 32-card deck. If standard playing cards are used, the penalty card, or the "kaiser," is the three of spades. The bonus card is the five of hearts.

John McLeod, who runs the online card games website pagat.com based in England, said the game may have been born in Quebec in the late 19th century under the name Les Rois, which he says was also played with specially produced cards under the name Lost Heir.

During the First World War, the game was reinterpreted with the four suits representing England, France, Germany and Russia, McLeod says. The kaiser card was named for Kaiser Wilhelm II, while the five of hearts was called Joffre, for the French general Joseph Joffre.

"It may have been contact between soldiers from different parts of Canada serving in Europe in WWI that led to the spread of the game from Quebec to Saskatchewan and maybe even Alberta," McLeod wrote in an email, noting the game is still known as Joffre in Quebec.

Currie programmed and sold his first computer version of Kaiser in the 1990s. To do so, he said, he licensed the rights to the name from Sylvester Gayowski of Prince Albert, Sask., who registered it in 1985 and sold decks of cards specifically meant for the game.

In April of this year, Currie obtained full rights to the trademark and says in the lawsuit that about 12,000 memberships have been sold to play his online version, which allows Kaiser players to compete against each other over the Internet.

"I'm protecting the public so there's no confusion over what they buy."

According to the Canadian Intellectual Property Office, trademark applications are researched to make sure they aren't prohibited by the Trade Marks Act. Applications are advertised in the Trade-marks Journal before they are approved.

Registration is prohibited when the mark is the name of the good in any language. An example the department gives is if someone tried to register the word "online."

"The purpose is to prevent someone from appropriating a clearly descriptive word (or words) and placing legitimate competition at an disadvantage in relation to language that is common to all," explained Lauren Hebert, a spokesperson for Industry Canada.

Baudais said he's fighting the lawsuit by arguing that the trademark issued in 1985 is invalid because Kaiser was already well-known as a card game in Saskatchewan. He said he's been collecting names and stories of people who played Kaiser prior to 1985 as part of his defence.

The Encyclopedia of Saskatchewan has no entry for the game and the Western Development Museum says it has no information either.

Lawrence Fisher, 84, who plays with the group in Nipawin, says he learned Kaiser when he was a young teacher on his first job near Bruno, Sask., in the 1950s.

"I really don't know where these people got it from. They were mostly of German descent."

Margaret Tipton, 53, who is the administrative assistant at Caleb Village, said she played Kaiser every day at lunchtime when she was in high school in North Battleford in the 1970s.

"My mum and dad knew how to play it. I'm not sure how they learned."

McLeod said some people in Saskatchewan of Ukrainian descent also call the game Troika, after the three of spades.

"From the information I have managed to collect, the main concentrations of players seem to be in Saskatchewan and Quebec," McLeod wrote.

Gayowski, the original trademark holder, said he won't talk about the lawsuit since it is now before the court. He learned the game from his family.

"It was called Kaiser and it was called Three-Spot and some other names," Gayowski said, although most people knew it as Kaiser.

Currie said it doesn't matter if people played Kaiser before the trademark was issued, because nobody was using it commercially to describe a card game before 1985.

"It belongs to nobody until somebody claims it and owns it."

Kaiser card game app to become Troika

A Saskatchewan programmer says it's cheaper for him to simply call his Kaiser card game app something else rather than fight a lawsuit over the name. Tod Baudais began selling an app for Kaiser earlier this year, but another programmer in the province who said he owns the trademark took legal action. Baudais vowed to fight, claiming the name Kaiser has been associated with the game in Saskatchewan for decades. But he now says the challenge would cost thousands of dollars, so he's decided to call his app Troika instead.

The game, which has roots in Saskatchewan and Quebec, is mostly known as Kaiser in Saskatchewan but some people also call it Troika or Three-Spot. In Quebec, the game is known as Joffre.

"Basically I was told by my lawyer that the full court process to invalidate the trademark would cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of $150,000. So far the app has made about $1500," Baudais, who lives in Thode, said in an email.

"It didn't really take too long to figure out that it wasn't going to be worth it to me to continue. I probably would have needed a second mortgage on my house and I couldn't drag my family through that."

Baudais said the trademark holder, K.C. Magic Data, has accepted his offer to change the name of the app and that the issue is now resolved.

Kevin Currie of K.C. Magic Data confirmed in an email that the lawsuit is over. Currie said that as part of the resolution, Baudais also agreed to update all prior downloads of the app to the new name.

The resolution requires that Baudais not use Kaiser in any business or products, said Currie, who lives in Saskatoon.

"I am very satisfied with the outcome as it was essentially the objective from the start," he wrote.

Kaiser is a trick-taking game played with a 32-card deck. If standard playing cards are used, the penalty card, or the "kaiser," is the three of spades. The bonus card is the five of hearts.

John McLeod, who runs the online card games website pagat.com based in England, said the game may have been born in Quebec in the late 19th century under the name Les Rois, which he says was also played with specially produced cards under the name Lost Heir.

During the First World War, the game was reinterpreted with the four suits representing England, France, Germany and Russia, McLeod says. The kaiser card was named for Kaiser Wilhelm II, while the five of hearts was called Joffre, for the French general Joseph Joffre.

Currie has been selling computer versions of Kaiser since the 1990s and currently operates an online version of the game. He originally licensed the rights to the name from Sylvester Gayowski of Prince Albert, Sask., who registered it in 1985 and sold decks of cards specifically meant for the game.

In April of this year, Currie obtained full rights to the trademark.

When the lawsuit was launched, many card players expressed surprise to learn the name of their favourite card game was trademarked.

Groups of players meet weekly at seniors' centres and Royal Canadian Legions across Saskatchewan for Kaiser matches, with some claiming they've been playing it since the 1950s.

Baudais had argued it was wrong for the name to have been trademarked in the first place, while Currie said he was obliged to defend something he had paid for that was legally his.

Baudais now writes the two sides have agreed to disagree and have moved on.

"I'd still like to thank everyone that has supported me over the past few months. It's really great hearing about all of the family stories and how this card game played a part in it," Baudais wrote.

Currie, meanwhile, said people can still play Kaiser just like they always have and always will.

"He can still sell the same game under a new name and I can still sell my computer game under the name Kaiser."

Introduction

Kaiser is a Canadian trick-taking game played by four people - two against two as partners sitting across from each other. A 32-card pack is used. Each trick is worth a point and there are two special cards: the lowest heart is worth +5 points to the player taking it in a trick and the lowest spade is worth -3.

This game goes by several alternative names. The name Kaiser, by which it is usually known nowadays, may have been introduced during World War I at which time the penalty spade card was seen as representing Kaiser Wilhelm II, and the bonus heart card was the French general Joffre. In Québec some players still call the game Joffre, and there are special cards for the game in which the suits represent countries and the cards in the suits various military ranks. Another version using special cards was published as early as 1893 under the name Lost Heir. It is even possible that Lost Heir was the original game, and the Joffre and the games played with standard cards were adaptations and improvements of it. Before World War I in Québec it was usual to play with a pack in which the sevens were the highest card and kings lowest, and the game was called Les Rois (kings). In Saskatchewan, some players of Ukrainian descent call the game Three-Spot or Troika, since they use the three of spades as the penalty card. I am told that in Saskatchewan the game is also popular with Native Americans.

The origins of this game are somewhat of a mystery. It has been played for several generations in Canadian communities of French, German and Ukrainian descent, and some members of all three groups vigorously claim that the game was brought to Canada by their ancestors. However, so far I have found no direct evidence of this game's origin in Europe: neither in France nor Germany nor Ukraine. So far, the earliest evidence of the game is from Québec, where it has certainly been played in logging camps since before 1900. For example Ray Benoit reports that his grandfather learned the game Les Rois in Québec and brought it with him to the USA: his immigration date is recorded as 1900. It is possible that it spread to other provinces as a result of contact between soldiers from different parts of Canada during World War I. One Saskatchewan correspondent claimed to have relatives in Kiev who play, but I have no direct confirmation of that, nor of whether the Canadian branch of the family learned it from the Ukrainians or vice versa. I would be interested to hear from anyone who has further information on the history of this game - especially any further evidence of its being played in Canada before 1900 or in Europe at any time.

I should also mention that the Canadian game Kaiser has absolutely no connection with the ancient Swiss card game called Kaiserspiel or Kaiserjass, and in the guise of Les Rois it has no apparent connection with the compendium game King, known in France as Le Jeu du Roi.

Pack

This game is played with 32 cards - 7 through ace in each suit, but with the ♠7 replaced by the ♠3 and the ♥7 replaced by the ♥5. The cards in each suit rank from high to low: A, K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8, 7 or 5 or 3.

Idea of the Game

This is a trick taking game, in which each trick is worth one point. In addition the ♥5 is worth plus 5 points and the ♠3 is worth minus 3 points to the side which takes them in their tricks. The team which bids higher chooses the trump suit and tries to take at least as many points as they bid.

Deal

Deal and play are clockwise. The first dealer is chosen at random - one way is to deal the cards around to the players singly until someone receives a Jack. After each hand the turn to deal passes to the left. The dealer deals out all the cards to the players, clockwise one at a time, so that everyone has eight.

Any player who is dealt no aces, no picture cards and no 3 or 5 can throw in the hand as a "misdeal", and the cards are shuffled and dealt again by the same dealer.

Bidding

Each player in turn, beginning with the player at the dealer's left has one opportunity to bid. He may pass or bid a number; the possible bids are from six to twelve, either with a trump suit or in "no trumps". The trump suit is not specified in the bid, but a player who wants to play no trumps must say so in the bid - for example "eight no". A bid in no trumps outranks an equal bid in a suit, so the possible bids in ascending order are: 6, 6 no, 7, 7 no, 8, 8 no, etc. The maximum possible bid is 12 no.

If a player bids, his bid must be higher than the previous bid, except that the dealer has the special privilege that he only needs to equal the previous bid in order to win the bidding.

Example:

Player A passes (isn't sure how many points his team can make)

Player B bids 7 no (believes his team can make at least 7 points without a trump)

Player C bids 8 (believes he can make 8 with a trump)

Player D bids 8 no (8 points without a trump)

Player D wins the bidding. Player D could also bid 8, equal to C's bid, and would then choose a trump suit.

If the first three players pass, the dealer is forced to bid at least the minimum.

Play of the cards

The highest bidder names trumps (unless the bid was no trumps) and leads a card to the first trick. Play is clockwise. Each subsequent player must play a card of the same suit as the led card, if able to; if unable to, they may play any other card they wish. If any trumps are played, the player of the highest trump wins the trick; if no trumps are in the trick, it is won by the highest card of the suit led. The winner of the trick leads to the next trick. When all the cards have been played, the tricks are counted and scores written down.

Scoring

The score depends on the bid, the number of tricks taken, and who took the ♥5 and the ♣3 in their tricks. The first team to reach a cumulative score of 52 or more points wins the game.

Each team counts how many points they have taken as follows:

- one point for each trick won
- plus five points for winning a trick containing the ♥5
- minus three points for winning a trick containing the ♣3

The bidding team's score

If the team which chose trumps took at least as many points as they bid, they add to their score the number of points they took. If they took fewer points than their bid they subtract their bid from their score.

If the team which won the bidding played with no trumps, and took at least as many points as they bid, they add double the number of points they took to their score. If they do not make their bid then they subtract double their bid from their score.

The opponents' score

If the opponents of the team which won the bidding have a cumulative score of less than 45, they simply score the points they took, irrespective of whether the bid was won or lost, and irrespective of whether it was played with or without trumps. It is possible for this team to score less than zero (if they took the ♣3 with fewer than 3 tricks); in this case their cumulative score will go down.

If the opponents of the bidding team have a cumulative score of 45 or more, they cannot add any points taken to their score, but they still lose points if they took less than zero in tricks.

Variations

34-card Game with Low bids

In Saskatchewan it is common to play Kaiser with a 34-card pack consisting of A-K-Q-J-10-9-8-7 in each suit plus the ♥5 and ♣3. Eight cards are dealt to each player, and a kitty of two cards is dealt face down to the table. The winning bidder names the trump suit (unless the bid was no trump) and then picks up the kitty without showing the cards to the other players and then discards any two cards face down except the 5 & 3.

Since the bidder has the advantage of using the kitty, the minimum bid is normally set at 7.

● This game is usually played with Low No Trump bids as an option. In Low No Trump, the rank of the cards other than the 5 and 3 is reversed, so that the 7 is the highest card of each suit, followed by 8, 9, 10, J, Q, K, A. The ace is the lowest card in clubs and diamonds: in hearts and spades the 5 and 3 respectively rank below the ace. A bid of Low No Trumps ranks just above the corresponding normal No Trump bid, so the sequence of bids in ascending order is 7, 7 no, 7, no low, 8, and so on.

Low No Trump bids are scored in the same way as High No Trump bids - the bidding side scores double the number of points they took if successful and loses double their bid if not. The other team scores what they took, without doubling, as usual.

Many groups who play with Low bids do not recognise a hand with "no ace, no face, no 5, no 3" as a misdeal.

Some play that High and Low no trump bids rank equally in the bidding - neither can outbid the other (unless of course one of the players is the dealer, who can always outbid another player by making an equal bid).

Some play that the intention to play "low" is not mentioned in the bidding. A successful no trump bidder announces whether the game will be high or low before picking up the kitty. Some play that any bid, with or without trumps, can be played high or low: this is announced before picking up the kitty.

Québec version with sevens high

In Québec, Kaiser is sometimes played with a 32-card pack consisting of 7-6-5-4-3-2-A-K in each suit. The sevens are highest in each suit and the kings are lowest. As usual each trick is worth 1 point, the ♠K is worth +5 points and the ♣K is -3 points. This version of the game is also known as Les Rois (the kings), the ♠K being the good king and the ♣K the bad king. Ray Benoit reports that his grandfather played this game in Sainte Marie-Madeleine, Québec in the 1890's

As usual 8 cards each are dealt. Bidding starts to dealer's left: each player gets just one chance to bid. The minimum bid is 4 and the maximum is 12. There are no no-trump bids. If the first three players pass, the dealer must bid 4. The final bidder declares trump and leads to the first trick.

The bidding team scores what they make provided it's at least as much as their bid, otherwise they lose the amount of their bid. The non-bidding team always score what they make. The target score is 40 points. If both teams reach 40 or more points on the same deal, the bidding team wins.

J. Héту describes another version in which in diamonds and clubs the 8's are used as the lowest cards instead of the kings. A trick containing the ♠K is worth +6 points and a trick containing the ♣K is -3 points. The minimum bid is 5, the maximum is 12 and the card led by the high bidder determines the trump suit. This game is also played to 40 points.

Joffre

In some parts of Québec a version of Kaiser known as Joffre is played with special cards. The 32-card deck has suits representing England (blue), Russia (green), Germany (brown) and France (red), each with cards from 7 (high) down to zero (low). The cards from 7 to 1 represent military ranks: General (7), Colonel (6), Major (5), Captain (4), Lieutenant (3), Sergeant (2) and Corporal (1). The English zero is a coat of arms, the Russian zero is a clown, the German zero is Kaiser Wilhelm II and the French zero is Joseph Joffre.

The game is played in a similar way to Kaiser, the Kaiser being worth -3 points and Joffre +5. The main differences are:

- The target score to win the game is 40 or 41, or in some places 42.
- There are no "no trump" bids.
- The minimum bid is 5 and the maximum 12.
- The first card played by the high bidder determines the trump suit.
- If the Kaiser wins a trick that contains the Joffre card, the person who played Joffre loses 5 points for the insult.

Joffre is played with these cards in the county of Bellechasse, for example in Sainte-Anselme, but also in Sainte-Germaine de Boulé in western Québec. Since these places are quite far apart, it seems likely that it may also be known in other parts of Québec.

Descriptions of Joffre and illustrations of the cards can be found on the Joffre page of the St-Anselme web site, and attached to the BoardGameGeek Joffre page.

Lost Heir

A rather similar game, using a pack of the same structure, was published by McLoughlin Brothers in 1893 under the name Lost Heir and subsequently by various other makers. The suits represent American, Canadian or British cities, and the cards in each suit are Mayor (7), Chief of Police (6); Commissioner (5), Detective (4), Captain (3), Sergeant (2), Policeman (1). There are two blank cards, a Lost Heir card worth +5 points and a Wrong Boy card worth -3 points.

There must have been several versions of the game, because the rules published by McLoughlin, as reproduced in the AGPC archives, specify a 48-card pack with 11 rather than 7 cards in each suit. These rules are rather different from those of the later games. The suit led by the highest bidder is trump, but the Lost Heir always counts as the highest

♣ and the Wrong Boy counts as the lowest trump. The two blank cards belong to no suit, so can only be played as discards when the holder is unable to follow suit. If a blank card is played to the same trick as the Lost Heir or Wrong Boy it cancels the value of those cards. There were individual and partnership versions of the game.

The bidding process was strange. The players other than the dealer bid for the right to lead first and make trumps. The dealer could either accept the highest bid and score the amount bid, or reject it, score nothing for the bid, and make trumps himself. At the end of the play each player or team scored the points they made, except that if the bidder made fewer points than the bid, his score for the hand was zero. When playing in teams, the partners simply added their scores together. The first player or team to 25 points was the winner.

It's clear that this game would be rather less interesting to play than Joffre or Kaiser. There is no possibility to capture the Lost Heir from the lucky player who is dealt it: the best the others can do is to annul its trick with a blank card. So it may be that Lost Heir was the original game, and that Joffre and Kaiser were developed later as a result of various improvements to its rules.

Other Variations

Target Score

Many play that if any successful no-trump contract is played during the game, the number of points required to win the game is increased from 52 to 62. This seems to be the normal rule in Saskatchewan.

Some play with a target score of 56, increased to 62 if a no trump bid succeeds.

Some play with a target score of 52, increased to 64 if a no trump bid succeeds.

Some play with a target score of 69.

Minus 52 Loses the Game

When playing to 52, some play that if a team has a cumulative score of minus 52 or worse, they lose the game and the other team wins.

With a different target, the losing score is adjusted accordingly. For example if the target score to win is 69, then the game is lost if a team reaches -69 or worse.

Bid to Win

Some play that the limit for scoring points for tricks without bidding is 47 points rather than 45. In this case if your score is 47 or more, you cannot score for tricks unless you are the bidding team, or unless you capture the ♠5 from the bidders, which wins the game for you.

When the target score is increased to 62 by a no trump bid, the amount that can be scored without bidding is also increased, for example to 56.

Some allow a team to score without bidding, however high their score, but a team can win by means of a successful bid. The non-bidding side cannot win the game, even if their score is well above the target.

Minimum Bid

Many play with a minimum bid of seven rather than six. On the other hand, some allow a minimum bid of five, but this is regarded by serious players as making the game too easy.

No Score for Overtricks

Some play that a successful bid scores only the amount of the bid (or double that amount for no trump bids). The bidding side scores nothing extra for points made in play in excess of the bid.

Three of Spades

Some play that a team which takes the ♣3 require three tricks to erase the 3 point penalty. If the team with the ♣3 take just one or two tricks, their score for the whole hand is minus 3 points. With three tricks their score would be zero, and additional tricks count one further point each as normal. The ♥5 can also be counted for plus 5 points provided that the team has at least three tricks.

Misdeal

Some play that if the first three players pass, the dealer can also pass, in which case the cards are thrown in as a "misdeal", and shuffled and dealt again by the same dealer. Some allow a player who holds all four 10s, 9s, or 8s to throw in the hand as a "misdeal". The same dealer shuffles and deals again.

Kaiser Bid

Some allow a bid of Kaiser, which means that the bidder alone will take 12 points in no trump - i.e. seven tricks including the five of hearts but not the three of spades. The bidder's partner must take no tricks, and the opponents must take a trick containing the 3 of spades. This wins the game if successful and loses the game if unsuccessful.

Some groups play with a Kaiser bid in which the bidding team has to take 12 points in no trump. If they succeed they win the game: if they fail they lose it.

Some play with a bid of Kaiser 40, by which the bidder undertakes to win all eight tricks alone (partner does not take part in the play). This scores 40 points if successful and loses 40 otherwise.

Card Passing

Some play that each player simultaneously passes one card face down to partner before the bidding takes place. Others play that each player passes two cards across the table. Note that a misdeal can only be called on the basis of cards held before the pass.

Some play with a card passing scheme similar to Hearts. In the first deal each player passes two cards face down to the left; in the second deal each player passes two cards to the right; in the third deal each player passes two cards to partner; in subsequent deals the pattern is repeated: 2 left, 2 right, 2 across, 2 left, and so on.

One correspondent describes a different variant in which two cards are passed between partners after the bidding.

Kaiser with a Pot

Some play that whenever a team loses a bid, they contribute an agreed amount of money to a pot. The pot is collected by the team that wins the game. This makes it less attractive to sacrifice by bidding 9 of a suit to stop the other team making 8 no trump.

Six players

It is possible for six people to play, either in three teams of two or two teams of three, using a 48-card deck without twos. The ♠5 and ♣3 remain as scoring cards even when they are not the lowest cards of their suits.

Five players

Dennis Bell reports that at Simon Fraser University, a 5-player individual version was sometimes played using a 40-card pack including all cards down to the 5, except that the 3 of spades replaces the 5.

Two Players

John Suchan describes a 2-player version in which each player is dealt a hand of 8 cards plus four 2-card piles face down on the table. After the bidding, the top card on each pile is turned over and both players can see these cards. In the play, you may play from the hand or a face up card from the table. After the top card of a pile is played, the card under it is turned face up and becomes available for play.

We return herewith the original document and request that it be processed pursuant to Section 26(2)(c) of The Trade Mark Act.

Dear Mr. Abrametz,

This is further to our correspondence of February 13, 1996 and your letter dated June 4, 1996 concerning an application for registration of a Registered User for the above noted trade-mark.

In our letter it is stated that the Office will process licence agreement and document terminating licence agreement as per paragraph 26 (2)(c) of the Trade-mark Act. However, after reviewing your request, it is noted that the document submitted on December 19, 1995 refers to an application for registration of a Registered User. Since Section 50 of the Trade-mark Act dealing with Registered User was revoked on June 9, 1993, there are no provisions in the Act to proceed with your request. Section 50 of the Trade-mark Act now refers to Licences. The document is therefore returned.

A further revision of the trade-mark file reveals that you had previously paid $100.00 with your covering letter dated December 19, 1995 and then $25.00 on June 4th, 1996. A refund in the amount of $100.00 is recommended.

If you need more information, please donot hesitate to contact the undersigned.

Dear Mr. Abrametz,

This is further to your correspondence of December 19, 1995 concerning an application for registration of a Registered User agreement for the above noted trade-mark.

On June 9, 1993, the Intellectual Property Law Improvement Act, came into force revoking the provision of Section 50 of the Trade-marks Act. As a result of this, all requests received after June 9, 1993, for the registration, cancellation or the variation of a user of a pending or registered Trade-mark will not be processed.

A practice notice has been published in the September 8, 1993, Trade-mark Journal to this effect, copy enclosed for your reference.

In view of the above mentioned amendment to the Trade-mark Act, there are no longer any provisions in the act which permit us to record the Registered User application as requested.

However, since paragraph 26(2)(c) of the Trade-marks Act provides that the register shall show, with reference to each registered trade-mark, a summary of all documents deposited with the application or subsequently thereto and affecting the rights to the trade-mark, licence agreement and document terminating license agreement will now be process in the same manner as security agreement. Upon receipt of the fee as provided for in Item 8 of the Tariff of Fees ($25.00 per mark) the document will be placed on the trade-mark file and the registers will be noted accordingly.

Your comments and further instruction will be appreciated. If you need more information, please do not hesitate to contact the undersigned.

A reply is requested within 6 months from the date of this letter. If a response is not received by the Office on or before this date the request will be treated as abandoned and the document submitted will be returned.

The declaration of use enclosed with your letter of September 4, 1984 has been received.

It is noted that the declaration of use states that use has been commenced in association with the wares as applied, except for the phrase "and all uses ancillary thereto" which does not constitute part of the wares.

Therefore, a revised declaration of use should be submitted deleting this phrase.

You are hereby granted an extension of time of 3 months from the date of this letter in which to fulfill the requirements of Section 39(2) of the Trade Marks Act.
