Certification Mark Standard

The certification mark indicates compliance with the applicant's standards, as provided in the applicant's SBP Certification Scheme document, a summary of which is as follows: Standard 1: Feedstock Compliance a) Feedstock shall be legally sourced: Operations related to feedstock sourcing and biomass production shall comply with all existing applicable laws and regulations. The feedstock shall be from a defined supply base, the forest owner and manager holds legal use rights to the forest and pays all applicable royalties and taxes, complies with requirements of local, national and applicable international laws, and carries out harvesting without violating traditional or civil rights. b) Feedstock shall be sustainably sourced: Feedstock sourcing does not harm the environment, biodiversity is maintained or enhanced, ecosystem productivity, functions, and services are maintained or enhanced, feedstock is only sourced from Supply Bases where the forest carbon stock is stable or increasing long term and is consistent with international requirements for land use, land-use change and forestry (LULUCF) emissions, sourcing shall not compete with wood sourcing for long lived wood products and benefits people and communities, decent working conditions are provided, and labour rights are safeguarded. Standard 2: Feedstock Verification The biomass producer shall ensure that all sourced feedstock can be traced back to the defined Supply Base. To do so, the biomass producer shall ensure that the sourcing area is within the defined Supply Base. The records of feedstock inputs shall include identification of volumes of Primary feedstock, Processing residues and post-consumer feedstock used, and a description of the inputs, including species for the primary feedstock and, if known, for processing residues feedstock. The biomass producer shall have access to records describing the sourcing area of all feedstock, and whether feedstock sourced is certified against an SBP-recognised scheme or the area is covered by a valid SBP-endorsed Regional Risk Assessment, if relevant. The biomass producer shall evaluate the risk, considering the probability and the consequences of non-conformance, for each Indicator of Standard 1. The biomass producer shall consider feedstock as SBP-compliant if the results of the Risk Assessment(s) conclude low risk for all Indicators, or the results of the Risk Assessment(s) conclude specified risk however the Risk Mitigation Measures have effectively reduced all specified risks to low risk, or the biomass producer can provide evidence that the feedstock can be categorised as processing residues and that the feedstock is certified against an SBP-recognised certification scheme, or the biomass producer can provide evidence that the feedstock can be categorised as post-consumer. The biomass producer shall make the Supply Base Report, available on request to stakeholders.

Standard 3: Requirements for Certification Bodies A third-party, independent certification process shall be carried out by accredited certified bodies.

Standard 4: Chain of Custody The biomass producer and components of the downstream supply chain, including trade, transport and processing, require Chain of Custody certification if those organisations or their customers take legal ownership of the product and wish to make SBP claims about their products.

a) Management system requirements: The biomass producer shall have all necessary infrastructure and operating procedures in place to effectively operate the Chain of Custody (CoC) system and ensure that feedstock / biomass can be tracked continuously without interruption through all internal processing steps from acquisition to transfer of material (or release for sale).

b) Feedstock sourcing requirements shall be adhered to.

c) Material handling: Page 4 of 5 SBP-certified biomass shall not be mixed with non-SBP certified woody biomass at any point after the biomass production

d) Traceability requirements: The SBP-certified organisation shall ensure that all transactions of material included in its SBP product group schedule can be traced at least one step upstream and one step downstream from itself, and that all material is accounted for whilst under its legal ownership.

Standard 5: Collection and Communication of Data All legal owners of biomass shall collect and record data relevant to each batch of biomass along the supply chain, including the feedstock description, energy and carbon data. Each Biomass Producer (BP) shall record the data in one of the three 'SBP Audit Report (SAR) for Energy and Carbon data' templates, where production and transportation of feedstock or biomass contributes to energy or carbon balance during the period of legal ownership by the biomass producer. The biomass producer shall provide accurate carbon and energy data, pertaining to each batch of biomass supplied, to the next legal owner. The biomass producer shall make all necessary data available using the DTS and using the templates specified in the relevant Instruction Document. The three methods by which information is communicated are the SBP database of greenhouse and profiling data, batch specific data which is specific to each delivery of biomass, and via the biomass producer's Supply Base Report publicly available on the SBP website.

Standard 6: Energy and Carbon Balance Calculation All energy and carbon balance calculations shall be supported by documented evidence which shall be available for verification by certification bodies. Energy and carbon balance calculations shall be undertaken in compliance with the relevant SBP Instruction Documents on energy and carbon balance calculations, according to the relevant market.
